Dear Friends -

The work of the National Women’s History Project has always been based on the scholarship of women historians and their ability to challenge basic assumptions about the female and male experience. We believe that the knowledge of women’s history inspires women and girls and encourages men and boys to better understand and to respect the female experience.

Women have faced the attitudes and assumptions that they are inferior. They have always had to prove themselves and work twice as hard as men for the same goal. Sexism and misogyny represent the dark side of society’s treatment of women and they need to be more broadly acknowledged. These are real, powerful forces that have shaped our country intentionally or unconsciously, and are in renewed evidence today.

Ever since the US Constitution was ratified, women have had to work to secure their basic rights as citizens. This is just one example of men defining women as inferior. Further, the ways that suffragists were treated during their 72-year campaign for the vote clearly show the hateful, misogynist attitudes and threats to women.

The NWHP champions multicultural American women and their accomplishments, because trailblazing women are essential makers of our history. In 2017 we are giving special recognition to women labor and business leaders.

Thank you.

American Museum of Women's History Congressional Commission Issues Report to Congress

After an 18-month exhaustive study, the American Museum of Women’s History Congressional Commission issued its report to Congress. The commission report finds the country needs a national museum dedicated to showcasing the contributions and experiences of American women. In its report, the eight-member, bipartisan panel provides a 10-year, three-part plan that begins with a Women’s History Museum Initiative within the Smithsonian that will create programs and exhibitions for other museums. Meanwhile, a site for a modestly-sized museum of 75,000-90,000 square feet would be selected and for other museums. To be called the American Museum of Women’s History, the museum of 75,000-90,000 square feet would be selected and

National Women’s History Month 2017 Theme

Honoring Trailblazing Women in Labor and Business

The 2017 theme for National Women’s History Month honors women who have successfully challenged the role of women in both business and the paid labor force. Women have always worked, but often their work has been undervalued and unpaid.

The 2017 Honorees represent many diverse backgrounds and each made her mark in a different field. Additionally, the Honorees’ work and influence spans three centuries of America’s history. These women all successfully challenged the social and legal structures that have kept women’s labor underappreciated and underpaid.

Facing stark inequalities in the workplace (lower wages, poor working conditions, and limited opportunities), they fought to make the workplace a less hostile environment for women. They succeeded in expanding women's participation in commerce and their power in the paid labor force. As labor and business leaders and innovators they defied the social mores of their times by demonstrating women’s ability to create organizations and establish their own businesses that paved the way for better working conditions and wages for themselves and other women.

They proved that women could succeed in every field. While each Honoree is extraordinary, each is also ordinary in her own way, proving that women business and labor leaders can and should be considered the norm. Most importantly, the 2017 Honorees paved the way for generations of women labor and business leaders to follow. Get Involved.

Breaking the Glass Ceiling

Norma Yaeger

First woman stockbroker to be permitted on the floor of the New York Stock Exchange (NYSE).

Norma Hason Nahmias Yaeger is a trailblazing stockbroker who fought for women’s right to join men on the floor of the New York Stock Exchange. She went on to found a mutual fund and two security brokerage firms.

Norma Hason, of Sephardic Jewish heritage, married young, stayed at home with her children, and deferred to her husband as the breadwinner. After her husband lost his job, Norma started dreaming of a better life and knew the one thing that interested her most was the stock exchange. In 1962 Norma enrolled in the Hornblower & Weeks, Inc. stockbroker-training program and became the first woman graduate. Not knowing any other women in the industry, she successfully fought to join her male classmates on the New York Stock Exchange floor. The NYSE did not previously allow women on the floor and Norma Yaeger is recognized as the first woman stockbroker to break that barrier. Norma also became the first woman on the Hornblower & Weeks Management Advisory Board.

The following year Representative Loretta Sanchez (D, CA) presented Yaeger with the United States Congress Award.

Norma raised five children with her husband Larry Yaeger. Now in her 80s, she continues to give lectures across the country on women’s empowerment. In 2014 Yaeger published her memoir Breaking Down the Walls. Her story is now being developed into a motion picture.
Fighting Against Workplace Discrimination

Lilly Ledbetter
Equal Pay Activist

Lilly Ledbetter took her case of employment discrimination all the way to the U.S. Supreme Court and beyond. Today she is a women’s rights and civil rights activist and sought after speaker. Ledbetter grew up near Jacksonville Alabama; she married, had two children, and worked various office jobs. In 1979 she got her dream job working as a manager at the local Goodyear tire factory. As the only woman working on the factory floor, she faced daily sexual harassment. Despite the discrimination, she worked hard and stayed at Goodyear, hoping it would eventually get better.

In 1998, after 19 years with the company, Ledbetter received an anonymous note informing her that she was paid significantly less than men doing the same job. In response, Ledbetter filed a sex discrimination case against her longtime employer. The case, Ledbetter v. Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., was tried and found in Ledbetter’s favor, but Goodyear appealed and her win was reversed. In 2007 the U.S. Supreme Court ruled 5-4 against Ledbetter, arguing that she would have had to file her complaint within 180 days after receiving her first discriminatory paycheck. Justice Ginsberg’s dissent argued that Ledbetter couldn’t have filed suit earlier because she was not aware of the pay inequity; Ginsberg urged her to keep fighting.

Ledbetter did keep fighting. In August 2008 she spoke about pay equity at the Democratic National Convention. On January 29, 2009 President Obama signed the Lilly Ledbetter Fair Pay Act into law. The new law loosens the time restrictions on filing discrimination cases, allowing the 180-day clock to reset every time an individual experiences an act of discrimination. Despite this victory, Ledbetter never received a settlement from Goodyear.

Lilly Ledbetter is now an activist, urging women and minorities to fight for their civil rights. In 2012 she released her memoir Grace and Grit: My Fight For Equal Pay and Fairness at Goodyear and Beyond.

Grace and Grit: My Fight For Equal Pay and Fairness at Goodyear and Beyond

Barbara "Dusty" Roads
1928
Flight Attendants’ Union Leader

Barbara “Dusty” Roads is a former flight attendant who fought against the airline industry’s sexist working conditions and regulations.

Dusty was hired as an American Airlines stewardess in 1950. In 1953, her employer insisted on a contract clause that all stewardesses hired after Dec. 1, 1950 would be fired at age 32; the rule soon became an industry-wide standard. Dusty called out the rule as gender discrimination and urged her union, ALSSA (Airline Stewards and Stewardesses Association) to fight against it.

After serving as contract negotiator and Chair of the Los Angeles base of ALSSA, Dusty was appointed ALSSA’s national Washington D.C. lobbyist in 1958. As a lobbyist she testified at hearings about airline safety, training, certification, and unfair age regulations. She befriended Rep. Martha W. Griffiths and Sen. Margaret Chase Smith, who both supported her cause. In 1963, Dusty’s efforts led to an early attempt at writing a bill to repeal the age rule. Dubbed “The Old Broads Bill” by Congressmen, it failed.

In her next move, Dusty and other stewardesses held a press conference to protest the age policy. It captured national media attention and a debate on the airlines’ intentions ensued. In 1965 Dusty entered the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC) agency the day it opened and, filed the first anti-discrimination complaint in the United States on behalf of her colleague, Jean Montague. After a three year EEOC fight, the age regulation was finally overturned under threat of a union strike in 1968.

In 1997 Dusty helped form a new independent union, the Association of Professional Flight Attendants (APFA), which remains the largest independent union in the country. She retired at age 66.

Now in her late eighties, Dusty continues to promote the need to protect hard fought employee rights that are in jeopardy today. Several books on the history of the women’s movement cite her contributions and she has been featured in many radio and TV programs, including an episode of the original PBS Makers documentary.

WORKPLACE DISCRIMINATION YESTERDAY & TODAY

Sexual Harassment

Women have experienced sexual harassment (including but not limited to unwelcome sexual advances, requests for sexual favors, sexual innuendos or comments, and unwelcome touching) for as long as they have been in the workplace. Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 expressly prohibits sex-based discrimination (including sexual harassment). However, harassment is still common in some male dominated workplaces and fields such as engineering, construction, and firefighting. Victims of workplace sexual harassment can file complaints with the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC) or follow their employer’s complaint procedures.

Pay Equity

For generations women were paid less at work simply because they were women. One justification for paying women less was the assumption that women had either a husband or father serving as a primary breadwinner. The Equal Pay Act, prohibiting paying women less for doing the same work, was signed into law in 1963. Despite the legal groundwork, pay inequity is still prevalent. According to AAUW the pay gap was 60% in 1960, 70% in 1990, and 80% in 2016. The gap varies widely based on location, age, and race with pay gaps of 54% and 63% for Latinas and African American women respectively. At the current rate, the gender pay gap won’t be eliminated until 2059. Victims of pay inequity can file complaints with the EEOC.

Job Segregation

Before Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, it was legal to deny employment or promotion to women based on sex. Even after Title VII, sex-segregated help wanted ads were still prevalent. The National Organization for Women (NOW) took this up as one of its first issues, and after much lobbying, the EEOC ruled the practice illegal in 1968. The ruling was strengthened in 1973 when the Supreme Court upheld the practice as unconstitutional. Despite legal protections, many fields remain largely segregated due to stereotypes and harassment.

Discrimination Against LGBT Individuals

There are no federal laws protecting individuals from workplace discrimination based on sexual orientation or gender identity. Some states do have laws on the books, but despite persistent efforts (since 1994), Congress has failed to pass the Employment Non-Discrimination Act.
Timeline of Women in Labor History

1864 Kate Mullany organizes the Collar Laundry Union, considered the first sustained female union.

1866 Black women laundresses in Jackson, Mississippi organize a union and strike for higher wages.

1888 Knights of Labor agrees to admit women.

1897 Leonora O'Reilly organizes the United Garment Workers of America.

1899 The National Consumers’ League is formed and seeks to improve working conditions for women.

1900 International Ladies Garment Workers Union is formed when seven local unions combine.

1903 The Women’s Trade Union League is formed, becoming the first national association committed to organizing working women.

1905 Lucy Gonzalez Parsons participates in the founding of the Industrial Workers of the World.

1919 The National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs is founded.

1920 Congress creates the U.S. Department of Labor Women’s Bureau.

1930 Rosina Tucker helps found the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, the first African American labor union.

1938 Luisa Moreno becomes vice president of the United Cannery, Agricultural, Packing and Allied Workers of America, the first Hispanic American vice president of a major labor union.

1941 The U.S. enters World War II; seven million women become industrial workers and 400,000 women join the military.

1950 The Salt of the Earth Strike is the first major strike led by women.

1965 Dolores Huerta is the first female leader of the farm workers union.

1974 Addie Wyatt and others found the Coalition of Labor Union Women.

1983 The American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees (AFSCME) Women’s Rights Department is created.

1986 AFSCME wins a $100 million sex-discrimination settlement against Washington State, and 35,000 state workers get pay increases.

2008 Yvonne Walker breaks racial and gender barriers when she becomes the first African American woman president of SEU Local 1000.

Women in Labor History

Lucy Gonzalez Parsons

1853-1942

Labor Organizer and Socialist Leader

Lucy Gonzalez Parsons was a labor organizer, radical socialist, and anarchist. She was a founder of the Industrial Workers of the World and was a prolific writer and speaker. At the height of her activism, Parsons was described by the Chicago Police Department as “more dangerous than a thousand rioters.”

Lucy Gonzalez had Native American, African American, and Mexican heritage and may have been born into slavery. She married Albert Parsons in 1877. Due to intolerance of their interracial marriage, the couple was forced to move north from Texas. Relocating to Chicago, Illinois, the Parsons became increasingly involved in revolutionary activism championing workers’ rights, political prisoners, people of color, the homeless, and women. Lucy Parsons wrote for multiple radical publications including The Socialist, and The Alarm, the journal of the International Working People’s Association. The Parsons were arrested numerous times for giving public speeches and distributing anarchist materials. In 1887, her husband was arrested and subsequently executed in Illinois for his assumed involvement in the Haymarket Riot, believed by many to be a frame-job.

Kate Mullany

1845 – 1906

Organized First All-Female Labor Union

Kate Mullany formed the nation’s first bona fide all-female union. In 1864 she organized over 300 of her fellow Troy, New York laundresses into the Collar Laundry Union.

Born in England of Irish parents, Mullany immigrated to the U.S. with her family and, following her father's death, went to work to support her mother and siblings. Mullany worked in one of Troy’s 14 collar laundries, where women worked 12 to 14 hour days washing, starching, and ironing. Although considered a good job, working conditions were dangerous and wages were low. Inspired by the successful efforts of local tradesmen, Mullany organized her fellow laundresses. Organizing was challenging, as many of the women had family obligations after work and there was no large venue for them to meet, but Mullany was determined, and the Collar Laundry Union was born.

On February 23, 1864 Mullany and her fellow workers walked out of their jobs in Troy’s laundries and went on strike. Mullany and the union demanded higher wages and safer working conditions. At first the laundry owners refused to negotiate, but the Collar Laundry Union, supported by the local Iron Molder’s Union, refused to budge on its demands. After five days, a few of the laundry owners finally gave in and agreed to increase wages by 25 percent, and the following day the remaining laundries followed. The strike was a success.

In recognition of her leadership, Mullany was the first woman to become an officer of a national union when she was selected assistant secretary of the National Labor Union in 1868. She later moved to Buffalo, where she married John Fogarty and opened the Troy Laundry.

Kate Mullany died in 1906. She was inducted into the National Women’s Hall of Fame in 2000 and the Labor’s International Hall of Fame in 2016. Her home in Troy was designated a National Historic Landmark in 1998 and a National Historic Site by Congress in 2004. It is owned and being restored by the American Labor Studies Center. It is also listed on New York State’s Women’s Heritage Trail.
Addie L. Wyatt
Labor Union Leader and Civil Rights Activist

Born in Mississippi in 1924, she came to Chicago in 1930 and helped care for her seven brothers and sisters. She married Claude S. Wyatt Jr. at the age of 16 and applied for a job as a typist for Armour and Company. However, African American women were not hired as typists so she was sent to the canning department.

In 1953, Wyatt became the first black woman elected to office in Local 56 of the United Packinghouse Workers of America (UPWA). An ordained minister, she and her husband founded the Vernon Park Church of God in Chicago in 1955 and began their work with Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. They participated in major civil rights marches including the March on Washington and the march from Selma to Montgomery, Alabama.

Addie Wyatt was also a leader in the struggle for the Equal Rights Amendment. Eleanor Roosevelt appointed her to the United States Commission on the Status of Women in the early 1960s and in 1966, she was a founding member of the National Organization for Women. Wyatt became a founding member of the Coalition of Black Trade Unionists in 1972. Two years later she was the pivotal force in the founding of the Coalition of Labor Union Women (CLUW) where she gave the keynote speech addressing 3,200 women.

In 1975, TIME Magazine named her one of the “Twelve Women of the Year.” A year later she became International Vice President of the United Food and Commercial Workers. As a leader in the labor movement, the civil rights movement and the women’s right movement, Addie L. Wyatt was known for her patience and persistence. She was a conciliator who built bridges for greater inclusion and for leadership opportunities for women and minorities. She counseled Barack Obama when he was a young community organizer in Chicago. Rev. Addie L. Wyatt passed away in 2012. There she fought against gender and race based inequities and for equal pay for equal work.

Yvonne Walker
President, Service Employees International Union (SEIU) Local 1000

Yvonne Walker is President of SEIU Local 1000. Her efforts towards economic and social justice are felt not only by her California constituents, but also by workers across the country and around the world.

Walker grew up in a military family and served herself as a Marine, where she honed her leadership skills. In 1995 she took a job as a legal secretary for the California Department of Justice. She soon got involved in her union and led efforts to organize her colleagues. Walker quickly rose in union leadership serving as Chair of the Office & Allied Workers Bargaining Team, and later as Vice President of Bargaining statewide. In 2008 Walker became President of SEIU Local 1000, the first African American woman to serve in this role. As President, Walker represents more than 95,000 public and private sector employees in CA. Her leadership has empowered workers and their families to have a collective voice in the fight for economic and social justice. She leads struggles against cuts to pensions, wages, benefits, and health care.

Known as an expert problem solver and innovative thinker, Walker is a sought after contributor to many national and international efforts. She served on the board of SEIU’s International Futures Committee, which brings together union leaders worldwide to strategize about visions for the future and how to get there. Walker is especially committed to the fight for retirement security. Towards this effort she chairs SEIU’s International Retirement Security Committee and sits on California’s Secure Choice Retirement Investment Board.

Though in many leadership roles, Yvonne Walker is always on the front lines of the fight with and for the rights of low-wage workers. Her efforts have won her the trust of the 95,000 California workers she represents. She has also received awards from numerous organizations, most notably the Coalition of Labor Union Women.

Laws Protecting Women in the Workplace

The labor movement has been at the forefront of lobbying for laws protecting employee rights. Below are the major federal laws protecting women from employment discrimination.

1938 The Fair Labor Standards Act set the 40-hour workweek, a national minimum wage (the same for men and women), and overtime pay. The act also prohibited most employment of children under age 16.

1963 The Equal Pay Act was the first federal law making it illegal to discriminate on the basis of sex in the payment of wages or benefits.

1964 Title VII of the Civil Rights Act protects from employment discrimination based on sex, race, color, religion, or national origin. The act also established the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC) to investigate any claims of employment discrimination.

1967 The Age Discrimination in Employment Act protects persons 40 and older from employment discrimination based on age.

1977 Title IX
Academia’s doors are opening to women faculty. Title IX has led to a higher number of female faculty members, especially at the lecturer, instructor and assistant professor levels. The wage gap has narrowed. And some women can finally be found in top administrative positions.

1978 The Pregnancy Discrimination Act amended Title VII to clarify that discrimination based on pregnancy is a form of sex discrimination. The law considers pregnancy a temporary disability.

1991 The Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) prohibits discrimination against a qualified person with a disability and requires employers to make reasonable accommodations.

1993 The Family and Medical Leave Act (FMLA) requires companies with 50 or more employees give a maximum of 12 weeks unpaid, job-protected leave to employees for the birth or adoption of a child, as well as personal or family illness.

2009 The Lilly Ledbetter Fair Pay Act amended the Civil Rights Act to ensure that the 180-day statute of limitations resets each time an employee receives a discriminatory paycheck.
Both Andra Rush and Nina Vaca succeeded as women business leaders in male-dominated fields.

Below are some the occupations with the fewest percentage of women employees (according to the 2014 Department of Labor statistics):

- Cement Masons 0.0%
- Bus and truck mechanics 0.3%
- Roofers 0.5%
- HVAC Mechanics and Installers 1.2%

Women Business Leaders

Andra Rush
Founder/ CEO, Rush Group

As founder, chair, CEO and president of Rush Group, which operates Dakkota Integrated Systems, Detroit Manufacturing Systems and Rush Trucking Corporation, Andra Rush leads the largest woman-owned business enterprise in Michigan, and one of the largest Native American-owned companies in the U.S.

In 1984, Rush borrowed $5,000 from her parents and used her credit cards to launch Rush Trucking with one van and two pickups. Today, Rush Trucking Corporation transports goods for Fortune 100 companies across the U.S. and Canada with 1,100 trucks and 700 drivers.

Her mission from the very beginning has been to create sustainable job opportunities in underserved communities.

Rush launched Dakkota Integrated Systems in 2001, providing service to original equipment manufacturers by managing the complete assembly and sequencing of integrated automotive interiors through a joint venture with Magna International Inc. Dakkota, recognized for supplier development and diversity by the Michigan Minority Supplier Development Council, employs 2,200 highly trained team members, and was named Supplier of the Year for quality and world-class manufacturing by Chrysler Group in 2013 and Supplier of the Year for three consecutive years, 2013, 2014 and 2015, by General Motors.

President Barack Obama acknowledged Rush during his 2014 State of the Union address for creating manufacturing jobs in Detroit with the June 2012 opening of Detroit Manufacturing Systems, a joint venture with Faurecia—the first such plant opening in the city in decades. The automotive supplier’s workforce has since grown to nearly 1,000, most living in Detroit.

Rush is a member of the U.S. Manufacturing Council, the principal private sector panel that advises the Commerce Secretary on government policies and programs and their impact on the manufacturing sector. She is an active member of several organizations, including Business Leaders for Michigan, Detroit Economic Club, Detroit Regional Chamber, Detroit Workforce Board and United Way.

In October 2014, she was inducted into the Michigan Women’s Hall of Fame.

Nina Vaca
CEO and Chairman of Pinnacle Group

Nina Vaca is Pinnacle Group’s Founder, Chair, and Chief Executive Officer. Her dynamic leadership over the past 20 years has propelled the company from a niche IT services firm to the workforce solutions powerhouse it is today.

Vaca is living proof of what is possible in this country. She is a trailblazer as one of the very few Latinas elected to serve as director of a publicly-traded company. Pinnacle’s evolution and astronomical growth is the result of Vaca’s fearless approach to overcoming challenges and her intense focus on delivering impeccable service and putting people at the heart of everything. Pinnacle has been named to the Inc. 500/5000 list of fastest growing companies for over a decade and in 2015 was named the Fastest Growing Women Owned/led Company in the U.S. by the Women Presidents’ Organization.

Vaca serves on three boards, and is determined to empower more women to follow in her footsteps through her At the Table initiative. She holds three honorary doctorates from notable universities and is the youngest graduate in her alma mater’s history to be honored as a distinguished alumna. Vaca has been featured in numerous publications and is a sought-after speaker and thought leader. This year Vaca joined the 2016 Class of Henry Crown Fellows at the Aspen Institute. A global leader, Vaca is a German Marshall Memorial Fellow and part of the British-American Project. As a PAGE ambassador, Vaca has spoken to and inspired entrepreneurs all over the world, traveling to countries on five continents to empower the next generation of business leaders.

Vaca is a committed civic leader and philanthropist. She advocates passionately for women and entrepreneurs and works to advance girls and women in STEM fields. In 2014, the White House appointed Vaca as a Presidential Ambassador for Global Entrepreneurship. She also serves as Chair Emeritus of the United States Hispanic Chamber of Commerce. An avid athlete, Vaca has participated in iconic races, recently raising $100,000 to help entrepreneurs.
Women in Government Service

Barbara Hackman Franklin

Presidential Advisor, Secretary of Commerce, and International Business Leader

Barbara Hackman Franklin’s career is trailblazing for both her extensive government and private sector work and for her efforts to open the doors to other women leaders. Serving five presidents, Franklin led efforts to increase the number of women in government, normalized commercial relations between the U.S. and China, and is an expert on corporate governance.

Franklin’s public service began in 1971, as a staff assistant to President Nixon. She led the first White House effort to recruit women for high-level government jobs, nearly quadrupling the number of women in those positions (1971-73). Her efforts are recounted in the 2012 book by Lee Stout, A Matter of Simple Justice: the Untold Story of Barbara Hackman Franklin and A Few Good Women. Following this, she was appointed an original Commissioner of the Consumer Product Safety Commission, where she focused on safer products for children (1973-78).

As the 29th Secretary of Commerce for President George H.W. Bush, she increased American exports with initiatives in China, Russia, Japan, and Mexico. Her 1992 historic mission to China normalized commercial relations with that country, removed the ban on ministerial contact, and brought back $1 billion in signed contracts for U.S. companies. Trade agreements quadrupled, with China grew dramatically in the ensuing years, as did foreign investment.

Franklin is President and CEO of Barbara Franklin Enterprises, a private international consulting firm. She has served on the boards of directors of numerous public companies, private companies, and non-profit organizations. She has also served in leadership roles for many professional organizations and was a founding member of Executive Women in Government (1973).

Franklin graduated with distinction from the Pennsylvania State University and was one of the first women graduates of the Harvard Business School. Among her many honors, awards, and honorary degrees, she was inducted into the Connecticut Women’s Hall of Fame (2013), The National Association of Corporate Directors (NACD) Directorship Hall of Fame (2014), and the Financial Executives International Hall of Fame (2015). She resides in Washington, DC, and Bristol, CT with her husband Wallace Barnes.

Alexis Herman

Presidential Advisor, Secretary of Labor, and Civic Leader

Born in Mobile, Alabama, Herman began her career working for Catholic Charities helping young people find work. At the age of twenty-nine, President Carter’s appointment made her the youngest director of the Women’s Bureau in the history of the Labor Department. In 1992, she became the 1st African American woman to serve as an Assistant to the president as the Director of the White House Office of Public Liaison. On May 1, 1997, Herman was sworn in as America’s 23rd Secretary of Labor and the first African American ever to lead the United States Department of Labor. During her tenure as a member of the President’s Cabinet she also served as a valued member of the National Economic Council.

As Secretary, Herman focused on a prepared workforce, a secure workforce, and quality workplaces. With that mandate in mind, she consolidated the Department’s wide array of skills development programs into a simpler, more efficient system. Herman led the effort to institute a global child labor standard; moved people from welfare to work with dignity; and launched the most aggressive unemployed youth initiative since the 1970’s. Under her tenure, unemployment reached a thirty-year low and remains so today. The nation witnessed the safest workplace record in the history of the Department of Labor.

Currently Alexis Herman serves as chair and CEO of New Ventures, LLC a Risk Management Firm. She continues to lend her expertise and talent to many corporate enterprises and nonprofit organizations. Herman is a former trustee of her alma mater, Xavier University of Louisiana. She Co-Chaired the Bush Clinton Katrina Fund and was a member of the board of the Clinton Bush Haiti Fund. Presently, she chairs the Toyota Diversity Advisory Board. Her nonprofit work today includes: serving as a Trustee for the National Urban League, a member of the Executive Board of Delta Sigma Theta Sorority, Inc., and the president of the Dorothy I. Height Educational Foundation.

Women’s Employment in the Federal Government

According to the EEOC women currently occupy 44% of all federal government jobs, but hold only 30% of senior executive level positions.

According to the Partnership for Public Service, the Social Security Administration employs the highest percentage of women (67.2%) and the Department of Transportation the lowest (26.4%).

In 1968, 13 women seeking to establish equal opportunities for women in federal employment created Federally Employed Women (FEW). The private non-profit continues to work at the national, regional, and chapter levels towards its four major program areas: legislation, training, compliance, and diversity.

Female Cabinet Secretaries

In 1933, Frances Perkins was appointed Secretary of Labor by FDR, the first woman appointed to the cabinet.

In 1953, President Eisenhower appointed Oveta Culp Hobby Secretary of Health, Education, and Labor. President Carter appointed Patricia Roberts Harris to this same post in 1979, making her the first African American woman to serve in the cabinet.

Every president since Carter has appointed at least three women to their cabinet.

President Obama appointed eight women to cabinet positions, the current record.

The Department of Labor has had the most female secretaries with seven.

Three cabinet departments have never had women secretaries; Defense, Treasury, and Veterans Affairs.

Secretary of Labor Elaine Chao (2001) was the first Asian American woman cabinet secretary and Secretary of Labor Hilda Solis (2009) was the first Hispanic American woman cabinet secretary.

Janet Reno was the First Female Attorney General 1993-2001.

Loretta Lynch was the first African American Female Attorney General - 2015 - 2016.
Women in Community Development

Rebecca Anderson
Community and Economic Development Organizer

Rebecca “Becky” Anderson and a team of Western North Carolinians created HandMade in America. She was founding director of the organization, which established a craft-focused economy for 25 counties in the state. It became a cultural heritage model for National Heritage Areas, and a model for 16 state programs.

As Director of HandMade, Anderson coordinated major projects in tourism, small town revitalization, and education programs for school systems. She established The Center for Craft, Creativity and Design for the North Carolina University system. Her heritage tourism program began with Craft Heritage Trail guidebooks taking visitors through 23 counties to studios, galleries and local heritage sites. As a result craft maker incomes increased by 23%. Under Anderson’s leadership, Handmade received multiple honors including the Award of Merit for Sustainable Development from Renew America, Inc. In 2003 Worth Magazine ranked Handmade one of the top 24 arts non-profits in the U.S.

Handmade’s Small Town Revitalization Programs included 13 towns with populations under 1,000, and over 12 years achieved 177 facades restored; 212 buildings renovated; 1,350 jobs created; 349 new businesses; 83 business expansions; $9 million public money invested; $43 million private money invested; and 183,713 total volunteer hours provided in towns with no town managers or town planners.

In partnership with the local community college and Resource Conservation Development District, Handmade established two craft incubators for ceramics and glass at a closed landfill using the methane gas from the landfills as the power source. An EPA LMOP feasibility study concluded the removal of methane gas was equal to planting 14,000 trees or removing 21,000 cars off the roads. Craft residents went on to establish 17 new businesses.

Prior to founding Handmade, Becky Anderson was also Director of: Community Development, Land of Sky Regional Planning Council, served as Director of Economic Development for the Asheville, NC Chamber of Commerce, and as Director of Economic Development for the city of Asheville. In 2000 Anderson was named among U.S. News and World Report’s list of the United States top 20 visionaries.

Maggie Walker
Businesswoman and Community Banking Leader

Maggie Lena Walker was the first African American woman in the U.S. to charter a bank. Her success as a business leader and community organizer made her an inspiration to African Americans and women across the country.

Raised in post-Civil War Richmond, Virginia, Walker gained leadership experience as a teenager when she joined the Independent Order of St. Luke. This fraternal organization promoted humanitarian causes and encouraged individual self-help efforts. Walker held numerous leadership positions and in 1899 she took the top leadership role of Right Worthy Grand Secretary; a post she held until her death. Under Walker’s leadership the Order significantly increased its number of chapters and greatly improved its financial solvency.

In 1902 she created a newspaper, the St. Luke Herald, to improve communication between the Order and the public. In 1903 Walker established the St. Luke Penny Savings Bank and served as its first president. Walker gained notoriety as the first African American woman to charter a bank. Walker’s bank later merged with two others, forming the Consolidated Bank and Trust Company, and she served as chair of the new bank’s board of directors until her death. The bank thrived as the oldest continuously African American-operated bank in the U.S. until 2009.

Walker’s continued success in business gave her additional opportunities to pursue her goals of empowering African Americans and women. She served on the boards of many women’s groups including the National Association of Colored Women, and the Virginia Industrial School for Girls. Walker served as a local vice president of the NAACP and as a member of the Virginia Interracial Commission.

Maggie Walker was married to Armstead Walker Jr. and the couple had two sons. She died in 1934 after suffering from paralysis and being confined to a wheelchair for the last six years of her life. Her home, in the historic Jackson Ward neighborhood of Richmond, is now a National Historic Site operated by the National Park Service.

Women have been active leaders in community development efforts throughout U.S. history. Women led community development efforts often focus on advocacy and activism and keep community member participation at the forefront. The below women are among the National Women’s History Project’s honorees for our 2006 theme, Women: Builders of Communities and Dreams.

National Women’s History Project

PREVIOUSLY HONORED
WOMEN IN COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT

Nancy Skinner Nordhoff (1932) is a philanthropist and environmental activist based in the Seattle, Washington area. She founded the Goosefoot Community Fund to support environmental, development, and rural economic support of Whidbey Island.

Juana Gutierrez (1932) founded Madres de Este Los Angeles, which defeated proposals to build a prison and toxic dump in her neighborhood. The organization also created a water conservation program that employed 22 people and opened a community garden.

Marian Van Landingham (1937) is a community leader, politician, and artist. She led efforts to transform an old military storage facility in Alexandria, Virginia into the Torpedo Factory Art Center (1974) and established Volunteer Alexandria (1980). Van Landingham served in the Virginia House of Delegates from 1982-2005 where she led efforts to fund public schools with proceeds from the state lottery.

Cindy Marano (1947-2005) was an economic justice activist working primarily for low-income women. Marano led numerous organizations at the national level including Wider Opportunities for Women, the National Workforce Network, and the Older Women’s League. In 1997 she created Marano and Associates, which identified strategies for low-income people to move out of poverty.

Winona LaDuke (1959) is an environmental activist known for her work on tribal land claims and sustainable development. LaDuke is Executive Director of Honor the Earth, which took a leading role in the Dakota Access Pipeline protests in 2016.

Women in Community Development
Since 1980, the National Women’s History Project has selected a theme for Women’s History Month and honored a set of women whose life and work exemplifies the theme. Each theme is different and each year a new group of women are honored, meaning that no woman is a National Women’s History Month honoree more than once. Below are some of the previously selected National Women’s History Month honorees that fit this year’s theme.

Mother Jones
(1837-1930)
born Mary Harris Jones, was a prominent labor leader and community organizer. Jones organized many major strikes and was arrested on multiple occasions for her work. Jones fought against child labor and in 1903 organized the Children’s Crusade, a protest march from Philadelphia to New York. She was a cofounder of the Industrial Workers of the World (1905).

Katharine Ryan Gibbs
used the post-Civil War technology of the typewriter to create opportunities for women to move from exhausting and dangerous domestic service and factory labor into office positions with decent hours and dependable pay. When doctors finally declared women were physically capable of typewriting, women moved into office positions where they were identified by the machine. They were called “typewriters.”

Frances Perkins
(1880 -1965)
was the first woman in the U.S. Cabinet, serving as Secretary of Labor from 1933 to 1945. Perkins was instrumental in many improvements for American workers including establishing unemployment benefits, setting a minimum wage, standardizing the 40-hour workweek, and ending child labor.

Rose Schneiderman
(1882 -1972) was a prominent labor leader in New York, drawing attention to unsafe working conditions following the Triangle Shirtwaist Factory fire of 1911. Schneiderman is credited with coining the term “Bread and Roses” and was instrumental in women winning the right to vote in New York state.

Linda Chavez-Thompson
(1944 - present) is a labor leader who served as Executive Vice President of the AFL-CIO from 1995 to 2007. In this role she helped pass a federal minimum wage increase in 1996, pushed for immigration reform, and worked on labor, women’s, and consumer movements for more than half a century. As Special Assistant for Consumer Affairs under Presidents Johnson and Carter, she successfully secured such milestones as the truth in packaging legislation. Out of government, she served as Vice President for Consumer Affairs at Giant Food Corporation, and president of the National Consumers League.

Aileen Clarke Hernandez
(1926 - present) is a union organizer and civil rights activist. She served as the second President of the National Organization for Women and organized the Women’s Strike For Equality in 1970.

Dolores Huerta
(1930 - present) is a labor leader and activist best known for cofounding the United Farm Workers (1962). A Presidential Medal of Freedom recipient, Huerta is credited with leading the first successful farm workers bargaining campaign and has been arrested 22 times for participating in non-violent civil disobedience. In addition to her labor organizing Huerta is also a leading activist for immigrant and women’s rights.

Rebecca Adamson
(1950 - present) is a prominent Cherokee businesswoman and advocate. Working with native peoples in the U.S. and abroad, she founded both the First Nations Development Institute and First People Worldwide. Adamson also established scholarship programs for native students studying business management at Yale and the University of Minnesota.

Esther Peterson
(1906 -1997) was a leading activist in the labor, women’s, and consumer movements for more than half a century. As Special Assistant for Consumer Affairs under Presidents Johnson and Carter, she successfully secured such milestones as the truth in packaging legislation. Out of government, she served as Vice President for Consumer Affairs at Giant Food Corporation, and president of the National Consumers League.

Madame C.J. Walker
(1867 -1919) is considered the first female self-made millionaire in the U.S. Born Sarah Breedlove, Ms. Walker made her fortune by developing and marketing her own brand of African American women’s hair and beauty products. Walker was an activist and generous philanthropist supporting such causes as the YMCA, Tuskegee Institute, and preservation of the Frederick Douglas House in Washington, DC.

Wear Red For Equal Pay Day, Tuesday April 4, 2017
Wear red to show how far women and minorities are in the red with their pay. Equal Pay Day is the symbolic day when women’s earnings catch up to men’s earnings from the previous year. Established in 1996 by the National Committee on Pay Equity, the day is an opportunity to raise public awareness about the persistent gender wage gap.

Equal Pay Day is celebrated each year on a Tuesday to recognize how far into the work week women must work to earn what men earned in the previous week.

Use this day as an opportunity to educate yourself on pay equity issues and to spread awareness in your community or via social media.

The National Committee on Pay Equity offers an online Equal Pay Day Kit and AAUW suggests fun ways to celebrate the day such as organizing an unequal bake sale. Learn more at pay-equity.org and aauw.org.

Building on the success of Women's History Month, one of the goals of the NWHP and the new Alliance is to have Women's Equality Day - August 26, the anniversary of American women winning the right to vote - declared a federal holiday. This will be a serious challenge, but what better way to celebrate "Women's Independence Day" and honor the inspiring nonviolent movement that overcame tremendous odds to win civil rights for American women. Today, there is no Federal holiday that honors women. Male figures, however, are celebrated from President's Day to Christmas. The great achievement of the 20th century - the emancipation and empowerment of women - calls for recognition at the national level.

We want the entire nation to celebrate "Women's Independence Day" and honor the inspiring, nonviolent movement that overcame tremendous odds to win civil rights for American women. The great achievement of the 20th century - the emancipation and empowerment of women - calls for recognition at the national level. We need your participation and financial help to help make August 26, 2020 declared a federal holiday. Visit www.nwhp.org and join the Alliance today.

The National Women's History Project

The mission of the National Women's History Project (NWHP) is to make women's lives visible. Women's achievements span the chronology of American history and reflect the rich diversity of the nation in terms of ethnicity, culture, race, religion, and politics. The stories of our mothers, grandmothers, and great grandmothers help us better understand their lives, the challenges they faced, and, ultimately, ourselves and our own times.

When women from all backgrounds are recognized for their dignity and accomplishments, they become role models for girls and boys. The recognition of women leads to an increase in self esteem among girls and greater respect for women among boys and men. The positive effects of recognizing women are: higher achievement by girls in school, less violence against women in society, and more stable and cooperative communities throughout the country.

2017 NWHP PARTNERS

The NWHP 2017 Partners demonstrate the expansive and varied ways women's history is being recognized and celebrated throughout the country. From universities to museums to scholarship funds to a wide-array of institutions and organizations all recognize the importance of women's history in establishing their goals.

Be sure to visit our 2017 Partners who are also listed on our website (www.nwhp.org) with a direct link to their websites. We will be working with our 2017 partners to promote women's history throughout the year with a special emphasis on National Women's History Month, Women's Equality Day and the countdown to 2020 and the centennial of women in the United States winning the right to vote.

2017 marks 100 years since both the victorious campaign for Votes for Women in New York State and the brave and historic picketing of the White House in support of the 19th Amendment.

Learn more about them. “Winning the Vote: The Triumph of the American Woman Suffrage Movement” is the source for comprehensive information about the drive for Votes for Women. With nearly 1,000 photographs and historic illustrations – many created by suffragists – this exquisitely produced edition brings the movement alive in a uniquely memorable way.

Reviewers have called it “Fantastic,” “Excellent,” “Visually rich,” “Comprehensive” and “Lively and Dramatic.”

The author collaborated with the NWHP and scholars across the country to produce a landmark work that examines and celebrates the remarkable success of American suffragists as never before. Over 76 individual suffragists are profiled.

To spread this timely story, the NWHP is offering “Winning the Vote” at a special savings. Individual copies, originally $85, are now $49.95.

Additionally, if you order 4 or more copies, the price is just $30 each, so for $120 you can get 4 copies of this women’s history treasure. A perfect reference, gift or school/library donation as the national centennial approaches in 2020.
